GODEY'S LADIES BOOK for March at G. VEGETATION ON THE MOON'S SURFACE.—On the surface of the moon are seen numerous streaks of narrow lines about one hundred in number, which appear, perhaps, more like narrow furrows than anything else. Sometimes they spread themselves on the lunar disc in straight lines. Sometimes they are slightly curved; in every case they are shut in between stiff and paralled borders. It has often been supposed that these furrows, the true nature of which has remained hithertounknown, ropresent the beds of ancient dried up rivers that have not ver

Other astronomers think they are streams of lava which has been vomited by lunar volcanoes, and which reflect the light of the sun with more intensity than the adjacent regions. Mr. Schwabe, a German astrono-Waverley Magazine, Monthly part, March, 25c. mer, endeavours to give them another explanation. He has published in the Astrono Leslie's Illustrated, Monthly part of the Weekly, mische Nachrichten, some facts which tend to show that these lines are the result of a vegetation on the surface of the moon. According to the author, if the surface of the moon be examined attentively with a good telescope and a proper illumination, we dislical Store, 75 Prince-street, opposite the Gazette | cover between the lines or luminous furrows of the high mountain called Tycho, and on different other points, a quantity of very delicate parallel lines of the greenish tint, which were not visible some months before the observation, and which disappear a few months after, to return again in the proper

These lines which are darker than the adjacent parts, are clearly the result of vegetation; and it is this vegetation that makes the sterile parts of the moon appear as bright luminous streaks. According to M. Schexpose of the secret doings of the I. O. S. M., by one who was S. C. L. D., 123c. wabe, these lines of vegetation are more particularly visible on the very bright parts of the moon which are circumscribed by the al, Waverley, Leslie's News, Harper's Weekly, mountains Hipperens, Albateguins, Werner, Stoeffier, Maurolycus, Gemma-Frisius, Pocolomini, Gatharina, Abouteda, Regic-Mountarius, Hell, Gauricious, Wurz Elbaner, Hensins and Count Wilhelm.
